Kitting Services

Fulfilling your clients' orders isn't just packing and shipping. Orders frequently consist of multiple products from multiple suppliers that need to be combined to produce a complete kit.

At Jay-Line, our goal is to provide kitting services to streamline the supply chain process. Designed with this goal in mind, our kitting services simplify your shipment preparation by organizing delivery of products from multiple vendors and creating custom kits to ship to your end destination. Whether it's boxing, bagging, sorting, labeling, shrink wrapping or packing, Jay-Line is your solution to all your kitting needs.

Four Colour Process On White T-Shirts

Our full colour, white t-shirts are printed using a traditional CMYK four colour process printing method. Unlike full colour offset printing on paper - which uses a very fine dot pattern, usually 150 - 200 lines per inch - full colour t-shirts are printed using a 55 line per inch dot pattern. The larger dot pattern allows the colours to blend together much better on the t-shirt fabric and provides better colour reproduction.

The final printed result is what's known in the industry as "PLEASING COLOUR". Due to the larger printed dot pattern, the colours and details will never be EXACTLY the same as the original design, but they will still be pleasing to look at. For this same reason exact pantone match is not available when full colour printing CMYK images on t-shirts.

Actual photos of the full colour CMYK process.

Chameleon FX Colour on Coloured T-Shirts

Coloured fabric T-Shirts provide a challenge when reproducing full colour images. The colour of the fabric can significantly impact the colours of the inks when applied, resulting in printed images that can be dramatically different than the intended result.

We have a solution to answer this challenge! We are thrilled to be able to offer our 'Chameleon FX Colour' process. This is the name we have given to the specialized method we use for printing on coloured T-Shirts. Our special software factors in the colour of the T-Shirt when digitizing the separations and also introduces white ink to print the T-Shirts. This results in screen printed images that are much closer to the original design.

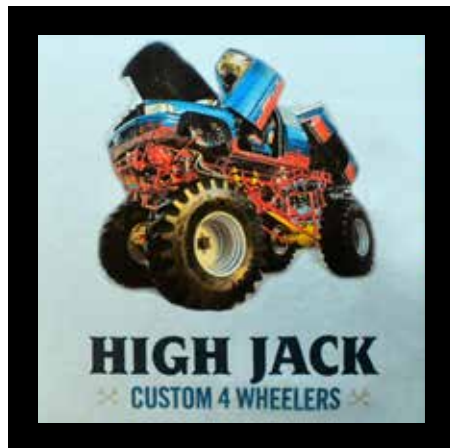

Unlike full colour offset printing on paper which uses a very fine dot pattern - usually 150 – 200 lines per inch - full colour t-shirts are printed using a 55 line per inch dot pattern. The larger dot pattern and the introduction of white ink allow the colours to blend together much better on the coloured t-shirt fabric. The final printed result is what's known in the industry as 'PLEASING COLOUR'. Due to the larger printed dot pattern, the colours and details will never be EXACTLY the same as the original design, but they will still be pleasing to look at. For this same reason, exact pantone match is not available when using the 'Chameleon FX Colour' printing method on t-shirts.

Actual photos of the Chameleon FX Colour process showing the same printed image on 2 different t-shirt background colours. While subtle differences are apparent, our amazing Chameleon FX Colour process successfully creates a comparable printed interpretation of the same image – even on such different backgrounds! You can anticipate similar, pleasing colour results with your designs!
